Meet the challenge

The world in which we operate is in a constant state of change. Changes in laws, business practice and community expectations have improved the safety and quality of the Camp experience, but at an increased cost of compliance.

The Australian Camps Association identifies twenty three separate requirements and associated check-lists that must be addressed in order to maintain accreditation. Without accreditation a large proportion of potential clients are automatically excluded from your business.

Camps are under constant pressure to do more with less.

- Additional Statutory reporting
- Greater staff autonomy and flexibility
- Improved Governance
- New Compliance requirements

It is essential that our tools properly support the expanding workload that we are required to perform, without consuming more of our scarce resources.

“Staff interviews suggested that many case workers lost at least five hours of work time every week in information duplication, searching, and inefficiencies stemming from the lack of an integrated system.”
